

Michigan Natives in the Landscape

Tips for Making the Most of Native Plant's Best Qualities

FREE HOMEOWNER WEBINAR

Native Plants:

Which do you already have and when are they best used?

By definition, a "native" plant is one that is living, growing, and reproducing naturally in a particular region. Many people are surprised to learn how many plants (trees, shrubs, flowers) already in our gardens and yards are native to Michigan, and how many more there are that can add beauty and other endearing qualities. Discussion will include what makes a tree 'native' and when they are best used or when a non-native would better suit the goal.

Garden writer and instructor Janet Macunovich and horticultural photographer Steven Nikkila give you tips for making the most of native plants' best qualities: lower maintenance, less disease and pest problems and more wildlife.

All are welcome.

Please join us for this free opportunity!

FREE HOMEOWNER WEBINAR!

Reserve a spot at www.ReLeafMichigan.org/RSVP

Tuesday,
November 10th
6:30 PM - 8:00 PM

Access Information will be provided in advance of webinar along with link to handouts

Thank You to Our Partners

Urban and Community
Forestry
Program